THOSE MARYLAND ANCESTORS Dr. Edward S. Everett

I began my genealogical studies with the idea that I was a New Englander of New England ancestry and that genealogy was rather easy. I started with family Bible records, soon linked up with the Massachusetts Vital Records series—and there I was. Ancestors seemed as easy to pick as huckleberries and nearly as numerous—in New England. But soon I awoke to the fact that only two of my eight great grandparents were from New England. The others were from Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia; and more were from Maryland than from any other state.

I have said that more of my ancestors ceme from Maryland than from any other state, but I do not really know that this is true. It is one of the peculiarities of my Maryland ancestry that I often do not know whether an ancestor lived inside Maryland or outside. For example, all the evidence seems to show that my great grandfather Isaac Everitt was born and grew up near Taneytown, Maryland. But he always said he was from Virginia, and family tradition has made him a Virginian. Perhaps the explanation is that he belonged to the Fairfax Monthly Meeting of the Friends, which met in Virginia. He may have regarded his religious citizenship as more important than his political citizenship or his place of residence. At least I can find no better explanation.

I find similar difficulties along the north border of Maryland. That border seems to have moved north or south depending on which side had the more aggressive county sheriff. At least I -- who have discovered a Pennsylvania sheriff imprisoning an ancestor who thought he was in Maryland, and a Maryland sheriff chasing another ancestor who probably thought he was in Pennsylvania -- may be excused for thinking so.

There are other Maryland difficulties that I have been spared. Place names can be fully as confusing as state boundaries. I am most thankful that no early forebear of mine settled at Baltimore. For Baltimore in those days was primarily the name of the county and the county seat was called after the county -- either Baltimore Court House or Baltimore Town. But the location of the county seat was changed at least four times in its first seventy years, and the grandchildren of the first settlers were grown up before Baltimore came to mean what it does today. Annapolis was different -- instead of the name shifting from place to place, the place shifted from name to name. That town was founded by the Puritans, who dominated it for forty years, and called it Providence. Then -- by the same custom that prevailed in Baltimore County -- it was named Anna Arundel Town after Anna Arundel County; and finally this was shortened into Annapolis.

Much confusion in Maryland genealogical research is related to the peculiar religious complications of the region. It is commonly said that early Maryland was Catholic, but this is not entirely true. Indeed the charter under which Lord Baltimore held possession provided definitely for the establishment of the Church of England. Also Protestants seem to have been earlier settlers and far more numerous in every county except St. Mary's. On the other hand Lord Baltimore himself was a Catholic and favored Catholics in the distribution of lands and offices. Thus there grew up an aristocracy of Catholic landowners and office holders, who had influence far beyond their numbers.

If Maryland was only doubtfully Catholic; it fitted still less in any other category. It was partly Puritan, but much less so than New England; it was partly Anglican, but less so than Virginia; it was partly Quaker, but less so than Pennsylvania; it was partly Methodist, but very much less so than the new frontier communities that were forming in the west. It is difficult to say anything definitive about Maryland religion. Nevertheless the seeker for ancestors must depend a great deal on religious records.

My own experience with church records was bewildering. The first impression was that such records were very scanty, and that the early religious groups had had very little system of preserving them. Later on I met with too much system or so it seemed to me. I was told that one certain religious denomination had records running back for more than two hundred and fifty years, and that their central organization had interested itself in them. It had invited small local groups over a wide territory to deposit their early record books at this central point, promising permanent care and preservation. The care was very careful indeed. No one was allowed to touch the books except the society's custodians. The searcher sat on one side of the table and made notes, a custodian sat on the other side to turn pages on demand, and the book lay between, pure and unsullied by non-dedicated fingers. Not only outsiders, but members of the contributing groups could see their own records only through this procedure -- and some of them resented it.

This was fair warning, but it aroused my curiosity. I wrote to the chief custodian of these records, stating that I believed that some of my ancestors had been members of one of these subordinate groups. I asked if the books of the congregation were in his charge, and if so, what must I pay to have them examined for items about ancestors. There was a long delay; and then I received a very short note which ignored my questions and demanded a preliminary payment of five dollars.

This is one side only. By way of contrast I may say that the late Mr. Hinshaw not only published a wealth of Quaker material, but would often answer letters of query with brief notes -- always to the point and always without charge.

Perhaps I have drawn too dark a picture of the difficulties in Maryland genealogy. After all I spent a very short time in Maryland; I did not know where to go nor what to look for. I did not see a single book of records of the established church, but from items that others have sent me since I know that there must be a collection of Parish Registers at the Maryland Historical Society at Baltimore. This collection contains at least four Registers that hold a special interest for me -- St. Paul's near Tolchester, St. Luke's at Church Hill, St. Stephen's at Ceciltown, and the one at Shrewsbury. Also my correspondents have some sort of access to St. John's at Centerville, Christ Church Parish on Kent Island and others. I have much the same story to tell of Quaker Records. I could find very little, but now I know that there is a collection at Swarthmore which contains the Cecil Monthly Meeting Men's Minutes, the Cecil Marriages, the Cecil Deaths, the Third Haven Births, Deaths and Marriages, and very likely many other record books. Then I depended on Baldwin for Maryland Wills.

Now I know that it is possible to obtain photostats of original wills from the Hall of Records at Annapolis.

In conclusion I feel bound to say that I sincerely hope that much that is written here is already out of date. I hope that there are Catholic and Methodist records that I could not find that will somehow and somewhere become available. I hope that the conflicts and confusions that bothered me are better understood by someone somewhere. And of course I hope that with these fresh discoveries and this better understanding, a dozen or more of my yet unknown ancestors will yet come to light.

(I am indebted to Tidewater Maryland by Paul Wilstach, published by Blue Ribbon Books, Inc., New York, for certain facts about Baltimore, Annapolis, and the religious groups in Maryland.)

"Too frequently the so-called historian is apt to dismiss with contempt the work of the antiquarian, even the antiquarian himself. He is apt to forget that, after all, the antiquarian does have an historical sense; otherwise he would not be interested in antiquarianism. The basic difference between an antiquarian and an historian is that the antiquarian is more interested in facts, while the historian is primarily concerned with the meaning of facts. But, without the facts, the historian would have nothing in which to be interested, nothing to interpret. And, although he may take only a sample of the facts for his work, nevertheless, the larger area from which to select samples, the greater the possibility that the sample will reflect adequately what it is supposed to."

11. JOHN F. EROBST(Micheal, Micheal, Phillip) married Lydia Kistler, daughter of Philip and Maria(Freece) Kistler. They lived in Lynn Township in the Lehigh Valley, near Wanamaker. Both are buried in a private graveyard near Messers Mills.

Issue:

- i. John Brobst, m. Lydia Lutz. They had 3 children:
  - 1. Daniel Brobst, m. ---- Gangewerre.
  - 2. Samuel Brobst, m. Sarah Brobst.
  - 3. Nathan Brobst, m. Polly Brown.
- 11. Jacob Brobst.
- iii. Semuel K. Brobst, b. Nov. 16, 1822; d. Dec. 23, 1876.

He was a teacher and Lutheran minister. Though he was always frail, he seems yet to have accomplished much. While teaching in Ohio, one of his students was James Garfield, later to become President of the United States. He was co-founder of Muhlenburg College and author of several books. He had one son:

- 1. Samuel J. Brobst.
- iv. Benjamin Brobst, b. 1827.
- v. Sally Brobst, m. James Koenig.
- vi. Elizabeth Brobst, m. David Ettenger.
- vii. Mary Brobst, m. Daniel Brobst. They had 6 children:
  - 1. Reuben Brobst, m. Orrie Bachet.
  - 2. Perry Brobst, m. Emma ----.
  - 3. Louisa Brobst, m. Levi Worley.
  - 4. Sarah Brobst, m. Geo. Donner.
  - 5. Carolina Brobst, m. John Schollenberger.
  - 6. Mary Brobst, m. Jonas Wuchter.
- viii. Louisa Brobst, m. Noah Seip.
  - ix. Annie Brobst, m. ---- Wanamaker.
  - x. Lovina Brobst, m. Lloyd Kistler.
  - xi. Daniel Brobst, m. Wilhelmina Tassmayer. They had 3 children:
    - 1. Alfred Brobst.
    - 2. Emma Brobst.
    - 3. William Brobst of Whitehall Twp.
- xii. Polly Brobst, m. Joseph Wanamaker.

15. JOSEPH BROBST(Christian, Micheal, Phillip) was the first of Christian's children born in Catawissa, Pa., Dec. 16, 1795. He was baptised January 1, 1796 (with two others) in a service held in his father's home because the new church had not yet been built. In 1811 he married Nancy(Mary) Ann Hartman, born April 30, 1797, the daughter of William (Wilhelm) Hartman and his wife Frances Rammee.

Joseph, like his father, took an active interest in church and civic affairs. He was long a member of the church board, and is credited by historians with assisting his father in Catawissa in the organization of the English speaking Lutheran congregation. Around 1850, he moved with several of his children and their families to Iowa, where he and his wife lived until their death. They are buried at Knoxville, Iowa.

Nancy Hartman was the daughter of William Hartman, who was born in Baden, Germany. He, with a brother and sister, were sent over to America by their father. On board ship coming over, he fell in love with a young girl named Frances Rammee (Rammier-Rehmer). When they landed they were married and settled in Wyoming, Pa. When the Indian massacre occurred, they escaped with their two children and came over the mountains and settled. The Hartmans are a noble, wealthy and powerful family in Baden.

ANCESTRY AND DESCENDANTS OF LEMUEL TAYLOR PIONEER TO OAKLAND COUNTY, MICHIGAN IN 1823 Compiled by Sarah Van Hoosen Jones, Rochester, Mich. Continued from December 1954

Part Two: Lamuel Taylor and his Descendants

1. LEMUEL TAYLOR, b. and bpt. 26 May 1762, Stillwater, N.Y.; d. 7 Nov. 1829, Avon Township, Oakland Co., Mich., bur. Stoney Creek Cemetery, s. Lemuel and Bathsheba (Dean) Taylor, whose ancestry has been presented in some detail in Part One herebefore. He m. in New York on 15 Jan. 1784, Sarah Boardman, b. 3 Nov. 1763, Sheffield, Mass.; d. 25 Nov. 1834, Avon Twsp., Oakland Co., Mich., bur. Stoney Creek Cemetery; dau. Joshua Boardman of Sheffield, Mass. and Otisco, N.Y. During the Revolution Joshua Boardman served as a private in Col. Mark Hopkin's Massachusetts Regiment.

The Taylor family lived in Aurelius, near Auburn in Cayuga Co., N.Y., where a scrutiny of land transactions shows them selling land in 1821 and 1822, evidently in preparation for their move into Michigan Territory.

In the latter year, Lemuel's third son Elisha Taylor made a preliminary trip of exploration to find a good location, and the following spring the whole femily ceme west - Lemuel, Sr., his wife, his five sons, his daughters and his widowed sister, Anna (Taylor) Millerd, together with their respective wives and children, numbering upwards of sixty persons altogether. They travelled by the Erie Canal and then by ox-cart via the Black Swamp to Rochester, Mich., which village was then but six years old.

From Rochester they cut a road through thick woods, for about one and one-half miles in a northeasterly direction, until they reached a hill overlooking a fair little valley with a stream flowing gently along its stoney bed. There, "in section 11, District of Detroit, Territory of Michigan," they laid out the village of Stoney Creek and built their cabins around a one-quarter mile square.

The Taylor sons were a hardy, persistant group; each man played his part. At that time all had to be farmers, but in addition their community included a wheelwright, a miller and a blacksmith. Elisha became a sort of captain of the home guard for the protection of the settlement. Orestes beceme the first Baptist minister ordained in the Territory. The father had become a Baptist exhorter in New York, and he continued so in Michigan for a year and was then ordained also. In the course of time the road through the forest was named Romeo, as it became the stage route between Rochester and the village of Romeo in Macomb County.

Lemuel Taylor and Sarah Boardman had eleven children:

- 1. SAILY B. TAYLOR, b. 24 Feb. 1785, in Massachusetts, m. NATHANIEL MILLERD, her first cousin. See next generation.
- ii. LEMUEL TAYLOR, b. 24 June 1786, in Massachusetts. See next generation.
- 4 iii. CRESTES TAYLOR, b. 11 Apr. 1788, in Massachusetts. See next generation. 5 iv. ELISHA TAYLOR, b. 26 Aug. 1791. See next generation.

Inspection of church records at Fleming, N.Y., shows that Nathaniel and Sally B. Millerd were members there from 1803 until they were "voted letters" on 5 Mar. 1823, in anticipation of their removal to Michigan.

About 1825-7 Nathaniel Millerd built the first frame house in Stoney Creek, which is still standing, in good repair and occupied. The Oakland County History of 1912, pages 119 and 191, states that Nathaniel became Judge of Probate in 1825-6, the second man to hold that office.

Nathaniel Millerd and Sally B. Taylor had nine children, all born in New York:

- 1. Betsey Ann Millerd, b. 11 June 1802; d. 4 May 1864, Avon Twsp., Oakland Co., Mich.; m. 7 Feb. 1819, Edward Martin.

The End

IN MEMORY Miss Alice Margaret Brannon, who died on Nov. 9, 1954 in Worcester, Mass., was a daughter of Henry and Certrude (Goddard) Brannon. A graduate of Smith College, Class of 1901, before her retirement she had taught school in Maine, New Hampshire and Gilbertville, Mass. Her principal interests were her church, travel and genealogy; a member of the DSCR and the NEHG Society, she was currently writing on "The Descendants of Dorrance and Mary Howe (Williams) Goddard," and "The Annals of the Brannon Family." One brother and four sisters survive.

SIMMEON FILLMORE'S BIBLE Contributed by Mrs. C. A. Monteith, Martin, Mich.

This Bible, "A Concise Introduction to the Study of the Holy Scripture" by Rev. Joseph A. Warren, Brattleboro, published by Fessenden and Co., 1836, has been successively owned by Simeon Fillmore, his daughter Harriet Fillmore Walter, Merritt Walter, Hiram Walter and Neil Walter of Martin, Mich., the present owner.

The entries through the birth of Harriet Fillmore in 1811 are by Simeon Fillmore. It is not known who entered the deaths of Harriet Willson and Margret Hoffman. Ruth Walter's death through the birth of Hiram Walter in 1861 are in the hand of Merritt Walter; the remaining entries are by Hiram Walter, except his own death date.

The following records are on the last pages and on the inside of the back cover:

"This Bible is the property of Simeon Fillmore who is the son of Nathaniel Fillmore, who was a son of John Fillmore who was born A.D. 1700 in Ipswich, Mass., and after his capture by and escape from the pirates* settled in Norwich (now Franklin) Conn., where he died at an advanced age. Was the father of eighteen children four of whom died young, the names of the survivors are as follows (viz) John, Henry, Molly and Thankful, and by a second marriage Miriam, Dorcas, Nathaniel, Comfort, Amaziah, Jemima, Lydia, Luther, Deborah and Deliverance. All lived to mature age, Amaziah excepted, and became heads of families."

* John Fillmore's story of his capture and escape from the pirates was printed in a booklet, but the family no longer has a copy.

Dear Jenny:

I hope I left you wondering last time; that Kirtland problem was supposed to be a challenge. I purposely left Elizabeth Kirtland "dangling". In spite of many months' study and work on her, I had never even "come close". What did you think about it?

There were discrepancies in names in the various sources. Lt. John Kirtland's wife, usually given as Lydia Pratt, was once Lydia Platt. Daughters Lydia and Elizabeth were both given as having been born in 1688; but I really raised my eyebrows when I read that Lydia, born 27 Jun 1688, had a daughter Elizabeth born the same day. Then too I found John "Chapman" for John Shipman. The fact that Richard Sacket had been associated with so many different towns in Long Island, Connecticut and New Jersey emphasized the need for a searcher with competent and familiar knowledge of all those localities.

However, the principal stumbling-block to the problem's solution was, I believe, my own wish-thinking. I could find no other Kirtland in or around Saybrook; in spite of my respect and esteem for the meticulous scholarship of Mrs. Ferris' Gates and Allied Families, I was simply positive that John Shipman had married Lt. John Kirtland's daughter Lydia, which of course left Elizabeth to be the bride of Richard Sacket. I wanted Lt. John's will examined; it might prove my theory. Failing that, I felt that a searcher familiar with the problems of the three early colonies might know other sources or material from which the parents of the elusive Elizabeth could be identified.

Seeking professional help is usually worthwhile if ...

1/ You need information from original sources, not available to you. The original record sources for the first 200 years of this country's history are practically all in the eastern states. Many people west of the Appalachians find it quicker and more economical to employ professional help than to go east to do their own searching. Mind you, I still think it's more fun to "do it yourself" -- but your own circumstances of distance, pocketbook and time will help you decide this question.

2/ You do not have access to a large reference library. Some problems aren't solved without those quick looks into dozens of volumes, to narrow the field. Many times it is just as helpful to determine where you don't want to search, as it is to know where you might find your quarry. And some specific books or manuscripts are available only in certain localities.

3/ You have searched all available sources and you need the specialized and familiar knowledge of one who has been over that ground many times. If you suddenly suspect your problem ancestor was a migrant from French Canada, you may save many hours, headaches and untold frustrations if you seek help from someone used to the special problems of the record in that part of Canada. Or you want data from C. Denissen's Genealogies of the French Families of Detroit in the Burton Collection; the local searcher knows it is unpaged and unindexed, but she knows how to use it. An experienced census searcher at the National Archives covers records more quickly than you can.

While I'm on the subject of professional help, when you decide to ask for such help, be prepared to pay for it. Don't ask a professional to "exchange" with you; save that for another interested amateur you've met through the DSCR membership list or the query page of the Hartford Times or your neighbor's Cousin Emma who lives "down east". And even Cousin Emma might prefer cash!

Are you still wondering about Elizabeth? Research at Hartford turned up the will of Lt. John Kirtland, definitely proving his daughter Elizabeth had married John Shipman. The will of another John Kirtland in the same district carried on the inventory, the signature of "Richard Sacket in behalf of my wife Elizabeth", the said John being "our deceased brother". (Item 1/ paid off.) The library's Hale, House and Related Families (1952) identified the administrator Samuel Clark as the son of Elder John Clark of Saybrook who married 14 Dec 1699 Mary, daughter of Nathaniel<sup>3</sup> and Mary (Rand) Kirtland of Lynn, Mass. and the Genealogy of the Rand Family (1898) and the Lynn Vital Records completed the story. (Item 2/) We suspect the four Kirtland children went from Lynn to the home of their Uncle John in Saybrook, after "widow Mary Kirtland married Dr. John Henry Burchsted of Lynn in 1690".

And that is where I felt most chagrinned. I had read all about the Kirtland family in Lynn, Mass. and the settlements in Long Island from that town. If I had been alert enough to add Lynn to my localities to be searched, the story might have ended much sconer. The answers were all available in Detroit, but it took the Hartford research to remind this inlander to "look for a boat". Better luck to you!

Early American Chandlers

In the early days of surnames, Chandlers were found in all parts of England. This seems to have been originally a name of occupation applied to dealers in any line of trade, likely beginning with the "tallow chandler" and the "ship chandler." It does not appear then that all Chandlers are descended from a common ancestor, but rather that the same name was taken by numerous separate families. Various coats-of-arms for Chandler in several areas of England attest to this. Early New England, Virginia and Barbados records contain the name for families with no apparent inter-relationships, and still other Chandlers have come to America in subsequent migrations from England.

To Duxbury, Mass. came Samuel, Roger, Edmund and John Chandler. Samuel was taxed there in 1632 and in 1640 married at Dorchester, widow Sarah Davis. Roger Chandler and Mary Chilton, both from England were married 1615 in Leyden, Holland, and with children Samuel and Sarah were living there in 1622. Plymouth Colony records show him taxed in 1633 and listed as a freeman in Duxbury that same year.

Also with the Pilgrims at Leyden was Edmund Chandeler, who was admitted to citizenship there in 1613, evidence that he was of age at that date. By 1625 he was residing in Barbados, but in 1633 was a freeman of Duxbury, Mass. "April 2, 1638, threescore acres of land are granted to Edmond Chaundler, lying on Duxborrow side and to be layd forth for him by Captaine Standish and Mr. Alden." At his death in 1662, Chandler's will named children: Samuel, Benjamin, Joseph, Sarah, Anna, Mary and Ruth, and bequeathed land in the Barbados to the three eldest daughters.

From Bishop's Stortford, Herfordshire, England came William Chandler who settled at Roxbury, Mass. in 1637. In 1621 he had married Alice Thorogood, and after her death in 1625 he married Annis Bayford of Farnham. Among his children were John who moved to Woodstock, Conn., Thomas who moved to Ipswich, Mass., William who moved to Andover, Henry, Hannah and Sarah. After William Chandler, Sr. died in 1641, his widow married successively John Dane and John Parmenter. Many of this William's descendants served in the American Revolution, among these Benjamin Chandler, Cen. John Chandler and son Josiah, Daniel Chandler and Capt. David Chandler. Dr. Thomas Bradbury Chandler, Protestant Episcopal clergyman of Elizabethtown, N.J. and his brother, Winthrop Chandler the artist, are also of this family, as were some of the ancestors of the late Pres. Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

At Newbury, Mass. in 1650 there was recorded another William Chandler, born in England in 1615, died at Newbury in 1701. He married first Mary Fowler, next in 1666 Mary Lord at Newbury and last Mary Carter. There were children by both Mary Fowler and Mary Lord.

George Chandler from Wiltshire, England died in 1687, aboard ship for America. That same year his widow Jane, with seven children, settled in Chester Co., Pa. One son William later lived at Londongrove, Pa., and other descendants of this family moved to Cynthiana, Ky. The town of Chandlerville in Johnson Co., Ky. was named for a Henry Chandler who married Jemima Wheeler.

One Job Chandler was a member of the Council of Maryland and one of the judges of the Provincial Court. He is believed to have lived in Virginia, married there and come to Maryland with his family after 1652. He died in 1659 leaving a wife Anna and children Ann, William and Richard Chandler.

According to the Certificates of Head Rights in the County Court of Lower Norfolk Co., Va., Job Chandler in 1648 and in 1651 received land for transportation of persons. Similarly in the same county John Chandler received land in 1652.

In Elizabeth Co., Va. in 1636, a John Chandler received 1000 acres for transportation of nineteen persons and his wife Elizabeth. Anthony Chandler arrived in Charles City Co. in 1650. Probated in 1766 in Bedford Co., Va., Daniel Candler's will named his wife Hannah and children John Candler, William Chandler, Elizabeth Castry, Elloner Ballard and Jedihiah Candler.

Queries on Chandler descent may be addressed to Miss Katie R. Mills, New Haven, Michigan.

The November program proved of wide interest, with its Symposium on Hereditary Patriotic Societies. George R. Raub, member of the program committee, presided.

Walter Clenn Scott, Governor of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of Michigan, described the General Society as having a present membership of 10,000 persons, of which the Michigan Society has 350 senior and 90 junior members. Mayflower members believe profoundly in the American way of life, with its roots in the Mayflower Compact. Research proving Mayflower descent usually shows eligibility for most other patriotic societies also. Society events are the Ceneral Congress every three years at its Edward Winslow House in Plymouth, and the state societies' annual Compact Day dinner on November 21. The Year Book is published every three years and member lineages are preserved forever. It is believed that a quarter million living Americans are Pilgrim descendants.

Marion Crawner, President of the Michigan Society of Sons of the American Revolution, related that the National Society was founded in 1889, on the 100th anniversary of Washington's farewell to his troops. It now has 20,000 members throughout the world, as compared to 175,000 for the D.A.R. There will soon be 48 state societies, besides those in D.C., Hawaii and France. Michigan has 419 members in three chapters -- Detroit, Grand Rapids and Bay City.

The Society of the War of 1812 was explained by its General Vice-President for the State of Michigan, Harold Hastings, who is also Vice-President of the Detroit Historical Society. The former society was organized on the same day that Francis Scott Key wrote "The Star Spangled Banner", by soldiers fresh from battle, vowing they would never disband. Their insignia is a Maltese cross, recognized by the War Department and sometimes worn on the uniform.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy was represented by Mrs. Sidney C. Probert, President of its Robert E. Lee Chapter in Detroit, and former Regent of the Louisa St. Clair Chapter of the D.A.R. Her chapter of U.D.C. has 34 members, all Confederate descendants born in either South or North. Persons eligible for membership are direct descendants of Confederate soldiers or near collateral relatives. The society publishes a magazine and maintains many college scholarships for women, besides supporting numerous patriotic movements. Members pledge allegiance to the United States flag, and also recite: "I salute the Confederate flag with affection, reverence, and undying remembrance."

Mrs. Alice Cowdin, Secretary of the Joint Detroit Memorial Day Association, spoke on women's organizations based on federal service in the Civil War. These are: Women's Relief Corps, Ladies of C.A.R., Daughters of Union Veterans of Civil War, Auxiliary to Sons of Union

Veterans of Civil War, Daughters of G.A.R., and several junior organizations.

At the December meeting, the speaker was Bernice Cox Sprenger, Reference Assistant at the Burton Historical Collection, Detroit Public Library. A deeply interested audience heard her speak on "Behind the Scenes at the National Archives, Library of Congress, and D.A.R. Library."

Mrs. Sprenger advised preparing for a trip to the National Archives by first reading Guide to the Records in the National Archives, 1948. Of the State Department records there, the visitor sees the Declaration of Independence, Constitution, and Bill of Rights, all kept in the shrine. Also seen are the Territorial Papers and records of the Continental Congress. The military records are extensive. Records of soldiers are indexed on cards and filed alphabetically by states. Pension records contain some genealogy, often showing names of parents. The Archives have war records from the Revolution to the Spanish-American War, and navy records from 1840 to World War I. At the General References Services of the Archives are pension claims and bounty land warrant applications, besides passenger lists beginning with 1820. Original census records and particularly the 1850 census for Michigan may be seen. At the Central Search Room patrons are aided by notebooks containing Registrations of Group Records, arranged in numerical order on open shelves. These records are from federal agencies.

At the Manuscripts Division of the Library of Congress, the visitor at the Reading Room must give reasons for using a particular collection, and show identification. He takes the desk assigned. A typewriter is permissible. Restrictions have been placed by some donors on use of the papers, and these are enforced. The speaker added, "The atmosphere is friendly and the assistants are co-operative, but the burden of the search is on the patron."

The Library of the D.A.R. in Continental Hall is found all in one room; the local history is in one alphabet and the genealogy in another. Readers have personal access to all shelves. They must, however, sign the register each day, and non-members pay a fee of one dollar. There is an elaborate index for family names, with 398 drawers for alphabetical arrangement, and about 100 drawers for other collections. Microfilms may be used for 25 cents an hour.

We take a bow! Mr. Warren Packer of Evansville, Ind. writes that "people from all over the country write asking for the list of families which was mentioned in the DSGR Magazine last spring. So I can see how the publication gets around and how thoroughly it is read". . . But now our fame spreads even farther abroad! The Nederlandsche Genealogische Vereeniging writes from Heemstede, The Netherlands proposing an exchange of their monthly Gens Nostra for our DSGR Magazine. As a result their interesting publication will soon be available in Burton, for those of you who can read Dutch.

GREETINGS AND FELICITATIONS: - We are happy to announce the organization on October 23rd last of a new genealogical society for western Michigan. Advance work on this project, masterminded by Mr. and Mrs. Lance Adams with the able assistance of Mrs. L. Charles Rowley all of Grand Rapids, has been under way for some time. Their first meeting at the West Side Branch Library in Grand Rapids, with speakers Mr. Walter Zorn of Monroe and Mr. Chester Wells, Secretary of the Western Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, was attended by about thirty enthusiastic genealogists from South Haven, Holland, Kalamazoo and Wayland, Michigan as well as those from the Grand Rapids area itself. Best of luck to our friends and neighbors!

WHOSE WHERE:- During October last Mr. and Mrs. George Blount of Royal Oak attended a convention of the International Municipal Signal Association which was held in Atlantic City, N.J.. Mrs. M. H. S. Hicks was obliged to miss the November meeting because she was baby-sitting her grandchildren in western Michigan while their mother underwent surgery. . . Lucy Mary Kellogg's trip to explore the genealogical resources of Indiana and Illinois was interrupted by the sudden and serious illness of her mother. Mrs. Kellogg is now recuperating in a nursing home in Howell, Michigan. . . Mr. William Hutchins of Albuquerque, N. Mex. has been in and out of the local Veterans' Hospital this past fall. Best wishes! Hope it's now more out than in.

Dr. Zina B. Bennett reports a most successful tour of the British Isles last summer, during which he collected some seven honorary vice-presidencies and five life memberships in various English magical societies. Letting no American grass grow under his feet since his return, he was selected last October to receive the Thirty-third Degree, Masonry's highest honor. . . Mrs. Robert F. Watt is this year's president of the Birminghem branch of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association. . . Interesting visitors from all parts of the world are being interviewed by George Cushing (our new Press Relations Chairman) on a weekly series called "World Neighbors" which premiered on November 8th over Radio Station WJR. Be hearing him: Also another office for our Program Chairman Miss Sarah VH Jones, a member of the Michigan State Board of Agriculture, governing body of Michigan State College, has recently been named president of the Association of Governing Boards of State Universities and Allied Institutions.

FAR AND NEAR: - Mr. E. H. Darling, consulting engineer of Hamilton, Ont., describes as his special genealogical project the "gathering of data on Canadian Darlings and their branches in the northern and western States." He mentions Mr. Henry E. Darling of Wiscasset, Me. as "the outstanding Darling genealogist in America." How many Darlings have we here?. . Mr. Henry C. Shinn, professional genealogist of Mt. Holly, N.J., and a triple cousin of the DSGR president, is making a series of tape recordings on local history for the New Jersey State Library. Isn't science wonderful?

It is with deep regret that we report the death of our member Mr. Frank F. Stover on Oct. 29, 1954 at his home in Wilmette, Ill. . . The sympathy of the Society is extended to Mrs. J. D. Kinney whose husband Joseph died on Oct. 28, 1954 in Detroit Osteopathic Hospital. . . Also our telated condolences to Mr. Roy McNaghten of St. Petersburgh, Fla. in the loss of his wife on Christmas Day a year ago, Dec. 25, 1953.

DID YOU SEE IN THE DAILY PRESS?- The nice advance write-up Mr. Zorn of Monroe got for his book on the descendants of the presidents. . . Mr. Nims' contributions to the collection of "Unusual Street Names". . . This choice quotation from an interview with our member, Mr. Howell Taylor of Ann Arbor, President of the Washtenaw Historical Society and Chairman of the Michigan Society of Architects' Committee on Preservation, "Preserving old buildings is necessary to the study of history in every community. If we know where we came from, what we were, and what we had in former times, we are better equipped to solve modern problems."
